An arrow on the body of the stripper indicates if the flat blade is removable.

In moderate use the black strippers may be used for a prolonged period. An inadequate use may create wounds to the plastic cover of flat blades and make the black stripper useless.

In order to avoid wounding the black strippers when the camboxes are locked it is necessary to place the camboxes in GX, to separate the two needle beds and to take out the strippers before trying to move the camboxes.

The wounded rolles may be polished by rubbing with an ultra-fine and used sandpaper, or with some cleaning liquid used for sinks or tiles.

It is also possible to correct the flat blades with a nail file working very lightly with patience.
